A stylized map of Jordan, colored in light yellow, set against a light gray background. The country's irregular border is defined by a thick dark gray line. In the northwest, a blue line represents the Jordan River, flowing into a light blue area that likely represents the Dead Sea. A white circle with a black outline is positioned in the northern part of the country, containing the word 'AMMAN' in bold black capital letters. A thin black line extends from the top of this circle towards the top edge of the map. The word 'Jordan' is written in a large, bold, black sans-serif font in the center of the country. The overall style is simple and graphic.
